

CONTENTS

Diplomatic History Volume 39, Number 5, November 2015

ARTICLES

- Lajos Kossuth and the Permeable American Orient of the Mid-Nineteenth Century 793
by Tim Roberts
- Race to Subversion: Nationality and Koreans in Occupied Japan, 1945–1952 819
by Simon Nantais
- Forming a Democratic Society: South Korean Responses to U.S.
Democracy Promotion, 1953–1960 844
by Jooyoung Lee
- Waiting for the Dust to Settle: Anglo-Chinese Normalization and Nixon's Historic Trip to China, 1971–1972 876
by Chi-Kwan Mark
- The United States, Israel, and Nuclear Desalination: 1964–1968 904
by Zach Levey

NATIVE AMERICAN FORUM

- Forum: American Indians and the History of U.S. Foreign Relations 926
- Indian Polities, Empire, and the History of American Foreign Relations 927
by Brian DeLay
- American Indians, American Law, and Modern American Foreign Relations 943
by Alexandra Harmon
- Crossing New Boundaries: American Indians and Twentieth Century
U.S. Foreign Policy 955
by Paul C. Rosier

(CONTINUED)

BOOK REVIEWS

The War that Split the World	967
by Rana Mitter
Capturing the Villages	969
by Marc Frey
Modernism Remade, Remodeled	973
by Giles Scott-Smith
No Justice, No Peace, No Nukes: The Bomb, De-Colonization, and the Radical Internationalism of African-American Liberalism	976
by John Fousek
The Long, Stubborn Dialogue between the United States and Cuba	980
by Jana K. Lipman	